EXPORT CONTROL AFTER THE WAR IN UKRAINE: THE END OF SPACE COOPERATION AS WE KNOW IT

Abstract

As a response to the Russian invasion in Ukraine, countries around the world introduced measures that limit the export of technological items to Russia, along with financial sanctions and listing of entities and individuals. This paper will outline the changes brought by the EU Regulation of April 2022 concerning restrictive measures against Russia and the US Export Administration Regulation, particularly with regard to space technology. It will also assess the extent to which the undertaken measures may impact international cooperation in space activities worldwide.
